SDG8: DECENT WORK AND ECONOMIC GROWTH

The World Islamic Sciences and Education University is dedicated to following Jordanian wage legislation to ensure that its workers have a decent standard of living. The World Islamic Sciences and Education University also takes into account the minimum wage (in JOD) approved by the tripartite committee established by the relevant ministry and the Jordanian currency, either in general or for a particular region or occupation. Its employment principles are also consistent with the Jordanian Labor Law, which prohibits wage discrimination and mandates that employers pay the minimum wage to their employees.

The World Islamic Sciences and Education University has over 620 employees, and it is committed to providing them with salaries that correspond to their work and the financial system. Jobs that pay enough for people to support themselves and their families are a critical aspect of economic growth, and The World Islamic Sciences and Education University recognizes its importance.
